Policy Research & Campaigns

At Citizens Advice we have two aims.

Aim 1: to provide the advice people need for the problems they face.

We gain insight and knowledge from advising over 2 million people every year across the country.

Meeting this first aim gives us a better understanding of people's problems than any other organisation.

Aim 2: To improve the policies and practices that affect people's lives.

We use our understanding and data to build up a picture of people's experience that's always up-to-date.

This is essential for our second aim.

It helps us research the really hard issues. It helps us get policy-makers to make changes. And it helps us campaign at local and national level for better policy and practice.

Your local Citizens Advice office knows the most about the problems facing the people of Reigate & Banstead and surrounding areas.

We have a 78-strong team of trained and dedicated staff and volunteer advisers. We have offices in Redhill and Banstead, and an Outreach service in Horley.

Our research and campaigns team uses information from advisers, and other local and county-wide data, to decide the policies and practices most in need of change.

The next step may be a research project to find the best way forward. Or a local campaign which involves building support, contacting local decision makers and working with broadcast, print and social media.

In the past year the research campaigns team has taken action on: the closure of local courts, council tax collection, homelessness, the importance of free advice.

We also supported national Citizens Advice campaigns on better private renting, energy prices, consumer rights.
